-The pork packers of Cincinnati have made a clear profit of $3 000,000 this season, the greater part of which, of course, has been drained from the South.

-The members of the Wisconsin Legisla ture, it is said, "blow out the gas" and "eat their mucilage," and a correspondent hopes they will soon learn better.

-Tue New Zealand massacre has developed son e latter-day martyrs for religion's sake. The natives captured by the Maori rebels were offered their lives if they would bow down to the Hamhan god, but they refused and fifty of them were put to death.

- The friends of General Sherman have purchased the residence now occupied by General ington, for $65,000, and intend presenting it to him directly after he becomes General-in-Chief in place of the President elect.

The Chinese have a remedy which they say is a sovereign cure for colds. They regard it as a breach of good manners for any one to appear in public when he is liable to cough or sneeze, "because nothing would be easier than to cure himself at once by taking a drug which they call to quian wkian, and assert to be a certain specific for a cold."

-M: . Johnson's nomination of General Dent . General Grant's brother-in-law, to be Minister to Chili is a strange movement. Nobody understands it. Some say he meant it as a jokeothers as a peace offering to General Grantothers, again, as a blow at Kilpatrick. Dent declines positively. Kil. is triumphant; and what Mr. Johnson meant is still a mystery.

-President Johnson intends, shortly after he goes out of office, to make a visit to Europe. The offer of a passage was lately made him by one of the German lines of steamers, and the offer was a ccepted by Mr. Johnson. It is his purpose, immediately after the 4th of March, to make a brief visit to Tennessee, with the view of arranging his affairs, and he will sail for Europe about the first of April.

-The Emperor of the French is said to be more embarrassed by his private indebtedness than even previous to the coup d'etat. Both he and the Empress have been living for the past fifteen years far beyond their means, and all of Eugenie's private property is heavily mortgaged. She never thinks of the rainy days which may be in store for her in the future, but is as extravagant as if the French exchequer were inexhaustible, and the Imperial aynasty not founded on sand, but sure to reign for centuries to come.

-A neat specimen of the slashing style in literary criticism is the following notice of Captain Clayton's Look on Spain from the Pall Mall Gazette: "Not worth the trouble of cutting the leaves. An utterly uncalled for account of a rapid railway journey right through from Havre to Valencia, with a snatch at the Balearic Isles, and a dash home by Barcelona and Perpignan. The mere idle scribbling of a chattering traveller on a beaten road, doing towns in the intervals allowed for refreshment and eking out his original matter by hashed guidebook. Occasionally vulgar, often flippant; generally silly, always stupid."

-Louis Philippe, in 1840, by permission of the British Government, removed the remains of Napoleon I from St. Helena, and deposited them, on December 15th of that year, in the Hotel des Invalides. On January 28th last, the French Senate had before it two petitions calling for the removal of the remains of Louis Philippe from England to France. The grounds brought forward in one of these petitions were that the late king had brought the bones of Napoleon from St. Helena to France; but the Senate rejected the petitions, laying down "that the pious duty of restoring these noble ashes to their native soil belonged exclusively to the family of the illustrious dead."

-Captain Duchesus commander of the steamer Pereire in her late disastrous voyage, commanded in 1854 the little steamer Vesta, which collided with the ill-fated Collins steamer Arctic off the banks of Newfoundland. The Vesta had a great hole knocked in her, and seemed destined to sink; the passengers and sailors flew to the boats, but the captain, brandishing an axe, declared he would fell the first man who embarked. This bold act re-established order. The cargo and ballast were carried aft and brought the ship upright again; with much trouble and patience the hole was temporarily mended, and, thanks to extraordinary care, the vessel was brought safely into the port of St. John, Newfoundland. By this time the unhappy Arctic had sunk, with three hundred people on board. Captam Duchesne's conduct won him the Cross of the Legion of Honor. More than five thousand persons were present at the mass meeting of Irish citizens at Cooper Institute, New York, on Tuesday night. Mayor Hall presided and made a very able and eloquent address. Resolutions were unanimously adopted declaring the sympathy of America with every people who are struggling for free institutious, and calling upon the Executive and Congress "not to entertain or

He accordingly despatched the canine. Awhile after, the shoemaker imagined the devil was in one of his children, a little girl eight years of age. Calling her to him, he seizēd her, placed a strap around her neck, threw her to the floor, placed his foot on her head, and taking a knife, cut out her heart, and swallowed the congulated blood. He was arrested some time after committing the deed, being found in his own house with the door fastened. Hupfer made no attempt to conceal his guilt, but gave a straightforward history of the affair, manifesting no regret at the occurrence. He stated that by drinking the child's blood he would never want food, and that he felt justified in the course he had pursued. He had not tasted food since committing the foul deed, claiming that he will want no nourishment the remainder of his life He will probably be sent to the insane asylum.

CHARLESTON

SATURDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 20, 1869.

Small Wares.

We are glad to see that the State papers are impressing upon their readers the importance of a diversity of pursuits; not with the idea that every, man should be 'Jack of all trades and master of none;" but in order that the majority of our wants may be supplied at home, and that we may not neglect the smaller ways of making money, which are often quite as profitable in proportion to the capital employed as the culture of cotton itself. The State papers are working earnestly to this end, and none more earnestly than the Edgefield Advertiser, which published some weeks ago an excellent article on the manufacture of small wares.

The writer in the Advertiser speaks of the good use to which rainy days and winter evenings are turned in the New England Great on I street, New Jersey avenue, Wash- States. In Massachusetts, on the margin of little brooks, are miniature mills where the farmers spend their spare time in making, by the aid of machinery, articles which they can sell at the stores. In one village, per day. The number put on papers last year years ago, children were required to braid a certain number of yards of straw each 000, or more than enough to supply every hu- day. This braid was exchanged at the stores for such things as the families needed. The quantity increased annually, and a hat factory was established to use up the straw where it was braided; and this factory now gives employment to one thousand persons, most of them being women and children. Here is an evidence of what the children may do; but there is as much and more to be done by children of larger growth. The Advertiser says :

of their natural advantages, it would be found that we could compete successfully in making that we could compete successfully in making various articles which would produce a larger profit than working in the fields. Enterprises could be tuilt up from small beginnings. Instance of conditions the condition of the cond stead of sending away the hides of animals slaughtered, why not tan them here, and then convert them into harness, shoes, and other articles which are in constant demand? Instead of sending North for brooms, buckets and woodenware, why not make them in Edgefield District? It is estimated that several millions of dollars' worth of baskets and willowware are annually imported into the United States. In 1857, a poor woman stated that she supported her family by selling to the visitors at Glenn's Springs; baskets of willow, made by herself and children. Peacock's feathers neatly made into fly-brushes would command a high price if sent to New York. Sumac, which grows wild in our woods and on our roads, is in great demand now, and would pay well to gather and ship. The wild flowers of the woods furnish an abundance of food for the bees, and the honey produced by them will always sell, if carried to the proper mar-

In a like manner hundreds of articles might be enumerated which would give paying work. And it is very properly suggested that merchants should bunt up the commodities which their section can produce to advantage, and send them to the markets where they will command the best price. This will encourage production, by giving the producer the certainty of a market. Let a merchant, for instance, acquaint himself with the value of sumac in the nearest market, and the cost of transportation, and then offer to buy all that is brought to him, and engage hands to gather it, paying such prices as will leave him a fair margin of profit to compensate him for his time and trouble. This would at once develope the sumac trade. In the same way scores of other new pursuits might be made remunerative. The silk worm, which is said to be dying out in the old world, affords us another opportunity. In California, the business is flourishing, all the eggs that can be produced being sold at $4 per ounce. It would be but little trouble to plant a few Morus Multicaulis switches on each plantation, and to give the needed care to a few worms. Instead of being a task it would be a recreation, and the business when shown to be profitable might be infinitely enlarged. The Advertiser says:

"The culture of silk has been considered by the Chinese for four thousand years as second in importance to that of roe. There, some species of worms produce four crops during the year. The value of silk goods annually produced in Europe exceeds $275,000,000, of which Austria produces $60 000,000 and Italy 850,000,000. In France, 500,000 persons are employed by it, or one in eighty of the population; and in England 16 000,000 pounds are annually imported, thus giving em loyment in the manufacture to 40,000 persons. When reared m a close, moist atmosphere the caterpillar is subject to various diseases; but in a climate as pure, dry and clastic as that of Aiken, they are far more hardy, and require less attention. Whilst in Europe from 30 to 60 per cont. are lost from the effects of climate. food and disease, here scarcely 5 per cent. die. and there are but few ants or insects to deratify may treaty with England which does not stroy the eggs. The morus multicaulis flour-being completed in six or eight weeks. The remuneration and the light nature of the work, is suggestive of its adaptation as an employment for that large class whose delicate health requires a mild climate, but whose means do not enable them to lead a life of idleness, as well as for women and children who are unable to undergo the fatigues incident to other labor. A cocoonery, in connection with a vineyard and orchard, would afford a constant round of employment, which would be a source of amusement, health and profit."

We belive that the small industries, which in the North have built up villages and towns and may do the same here, are now attracting more attention than ever before. Requiring no capital, and giving a fair profit with but trifling risk, they are within the reach of all classes of our people.

The South Carolina Railroad.

The Spartanburg Spartan apeaks in highly complimentary terms of the recent report of the President and Directors of the South Carolina Railroad, which it terms "the aorta-the main artery of trade and travel through South Carolina-and thence to all parts of the South, the North and the West." We quote from its article :

"Let us see through what difficulties the road has had to work its way, and what enormous losses it has sustained. Throughout an unexpected and protracted war-with the immense wear and tear of machinery - in spite of the lack of suitable workmenthe wearing out of iron track with no means of replacing it, nor to obtain new locomotives-yet it still lives. The speed of the train had been necessarily reduced to about ten miles per hour, as a measure of safety to the thousands upon thousands of our brave soldier passengers within and on top of the cars. This was a great loss to the company. But, when we consider that in 1865 eighty-three miles of the track was utterly ruined-bridges, cars, shops and depots hid waste by Sherman's ruthless army, an empty treasury, save Confederate bonds and no credit, it is matter of astonishment that the road yet lives and is doing well. Against all these losses and difficulties, this great institution has contended successfully-and we are proud and glad that Southern honor, endurance, enterprise and patriotism have been vindicated, and this oldest and most magnificent highway of the South stands rectus in curia before a liberal and generous public. A word more. What would we have done without this road during the late war? What would we do without it now?"
